

BLOOMINGTON, INDIANA, Mar. 9, 1891.

Dear Dr. Jordan:-

I enclose a copy of the notification which I received of my election to the chair of zoology in this University, which I hope you will bring to the attention of the Honorable Board of Trustees. At the time when the increase of salaries was made last Spring, I was absent on leave, and not able to remind you of the conditions under which I accepted the offer made me. I now take the earliest opportunity of doing so.

Yours respectfully,

Charles H. Gilbert.

BLOOMINGTON, INDIANA, Nov. 13, 1898.

Professor Charles H. Gilbert:

My dear Sir:-

It is my pleasant duty to notify you of your election as Professor of Zoology in the Indiana University, your work to begin on August 1st., your salary to be $1700.- or more in case any two or more professors receive a higher salary.

The work will be the courses in general zoology, the work in physiology, and the curator<sup>ship</sup> of the museum.

I trust that you may see your way to a prompt acceptance of this offer, made unanimously by the Board of Trustees.

I am

Very cordially yours,

David S. Jordan.
