

better world conditions should be so poorly versed in the sciences that enlighten on these problems, so ignorant of the plans proposed to solve them, and yet be so very expert in deciding whether it is larceny or embezzlement, whether it is trespass or trespass on the case.

A Ship

This is the certain end.

Is it well done to build a ship,
Teach it to spurn the sand,
To set out for far ports
On trackless ways,
To love the wind and sea,
Glory in storms,
Outride a hundred gales,
Drive on and on through fog and dark,
Obedient always to the Master's will,
Only at last
To lie here in the sand?

—Abner