Synopsis

Act I

Elvira is complaining that her husband, Mustafa no longer loves her. Mustafa enters, silences Elvira and sends everyone but Haly away. Mustafa tells him that he is bored with his wife and plans to marry her off to Lindoro, his Italian slave. He also orders Haly to find him an Italian girl. Lindoro dreams of his true love, Isabella, when Mustafa enters and explains his plan, assuring Lindoro that Elvira will be a perfect match.

Haly and his men take some shipwreck victims prisoners: Isabella who is looking for her lost love, Lindoro, and her companion Taddeo. Isabella vows that she will overcome her troubles. To save Taddeo, she announces that he is her uncle. Haly, on the other hand, is delighted when he finds out that Isabella is Italian--exactly what Mustafa had asked for! When they are left alone, Isabella becomes annoyed by Taddeo's jealousy but, rather than quarrel, they resolve to join forces in order to survive.

Back in the palace, Mustafa offers to send Lindoro back to Italy as long as he takes Elvira with him. Haly enters announcing that he has found an Italian beauty. Mustafa is overjoyed and receives Isabella. He is beguiled by her. Just at that moment, Lindoro, Elvira, and Zulma arrive to say goodbye. Lindoro and Isabella are astonished to see each other again, much to the amazement of everyone else. Isabella then demands that Elvira remain with her husband and that the Italian slave be made hers. Mustafa tries to oppose this but, as the act ends, Isabella shows him who is really in charge.

Act II

Everyone in the palace is commenting on the recent events. Mustafa sends his wife to tell Isabella he's going to come and visit her. When Isabella and Lindoro are finally alone, Lindoro reassures her that he is faithful and has no intention of marrying Elvira. They plot together to fool Mustafa and then escape. In the meantime, Mustafa, trying to impress Isabella, appoints Taddeo his Kaimakan, or lieutenant.

Isabella criticizes Elvira for being too submissive and promises to show her what sort of treatment a man like Mustafa deserves. She tells Elvira to hide and watch what happens. Mustafa arrives with Taddeo, having arranged that Taddeo should leave when Mustafa sneezes. Taddeo, however, pretends to be deaf. Isabella calls for coffee and, to Mustafa's surprise, invites Elvira to join them. Mustafa leaves in fury. Haly, who has noticed what is going on, comments on the prowess of Italian women.

Taddeo reveals to Lindoro that he is not Isabella's uncle but her lover. Mustafa arrives, accusing Isabella of tricking him, but Lindoro calms him down: Isabella will name him a pappataci, an honor awarded to only the most ardent of lovers. Lindoro explains that as a pappataci, Mustafa's only duty will be to eat, drink, and sleep.

Isabella tells the Italian slaves that she is planning to lead them to freedom. Mustafa arrives and the ceremony begins. Isabella explains that as a pappataci, he must swear an oath of eating, drinking, and keeping silent, no matter what happens. The ceremony is completed and Mustafa is immediately put to the test as Lindoro and Isabella sing to each other. Taddeo realizes who Lindoro is and what is happening. He tries to get Mustafa to intervene. But, remembering the oath of the pappataci, Mustafa remains deaf and dumb. When Mustafa finally sees that the Italians are escaping, he calls his troops, but they are all drunk. The Italians bid farewell as Mustafa begs Elvira to forgive him.

Director's Notes

by Julia Pevzner

When listening to Rossini operas and thinking that he wrote them in so few days, I am always in awe . . . What a great genius, what a master, and what a sense of humor! And L'Italiana in Algeri (The Italian Girl in Algiers) is a great example: a wonderful dramma giocoso that makes fun of opera seria and does it in a most charming way, presenting great entertainment.

What is L'Italiana about? Is it the clash of two very different cultures or a heart-breaking personal story of a family crisis?

I think it's really both issues. Clearly, the contrast between two cultures interested Rossini very much. In Il Turco in Italia, he sends a Turkish prince to pursue an Italian lady and thus creates an encounter of familiar European mentality with exotic culture, depicting a great range of characters. In L'Italiana, Isabella leaves Italy to confront the world of the Orient (or at least what Rossini thought of it) in order to save her love and manages to teach Mustafa and Elvira a lesson in matrimonial relationship.

The plot of the opera is very simple, as usual: a man goes through his middle-age crisis and looks for a dream girl; his loving wife obeys his wish to get rid of her. The mysterious dream girl happens to be smart and assertive and serves as a marriage counselor to the couple in distress. Her own fiancé, trapped in slavery, has a chance to see his wife-to-be in action while she plans their escape, and her unfortunate suitor learns a lesson in understanding one's limitations.

The wonderful music of Rossini turns the story into real fun: it's full of humor and inspiration. Opera seria (Lindoro and Elvira) and opera buffa (Mustafa, Haly, Zulma, and Taddeo) co-exist in peace thanks to Isabella, who brings the two worlds together. She feels free in both worlds and thus can manipulate both to get what she wants.

I really feel for Elvira, Mustafa's wife, who loves her husband with all her heart but gets rejected so cruelly after years of marriage. Her husband's whim to get a better girl hurts her tremendously, but she still obeys without fighting. Her unawareness of a different mentality, where a woman actually has a say in marital relationship, causes her to be a hopeless victim. She is lucky to have someone like Isabella on her side, and hopefully next time her husband has a new whim, she'll know how to deal with that.

Back to the cultural difference issue: in today's political climate, we decided to stay out of politics and concentrate on a humorous approach to all weaknesses of human nature.

Program Notes

by Aaron Riedford

Gioachino Rossini's fame today comes largely from a few massively popular pieces, particularly his overtures from William Tell and The Barber of Seville (the latter thanks partially to Bugs Bunny's Rabbit of Seville cartoon). This renown, however, pales in comparison to the fame the composer enjoyed during his own lifetime. And his fame was well deserved. He began lessons in composition and singing at 10 years old, and by age 12, Rossini had already composed pieces on commission and sang publicly at the Teatro Comunale in Imola. After several more years of compositional study, Rossini received his first opera commission, for a one-act farce from one of Venice's smaller theaters. Two years later, his La pietra del paragone premiered at the illustrious La Scala opera house in Milan; this paved the way for even greater success the next year with Tancredi, a fully fledged opera seria and a testament to Rossini's maturing compositional style. Tancredi rocketed Rossini to superstardom throughout Europe, and the 21-year-old composer showed no sign of slowing down.

Two months after Tancredi's premiere, Rossini received the commission for what would become his first mature two-act opera buffa (comic opera): The Italian Girl in Algiers. The Teatro San Benedetto in Venice, desperate to fill the gap left by another composer's failure to finish an opera, commissioned the work on very short notice. As a result, Rossini received substantially more money than he had for previous operas and completed the work extremely quickly, probably in 27 days (although the composer claimed he managed it in 16). Luigi Mosca had composed a version of Italian Girl only a few years earlier, and Rossini adapted that opera's libretto—a kind of nineteenth-century equivalent of Hollywood re-booting its popular film franchises today. While critics wrote Rossini's Italian Girl off simply as a knockoff of Mosca, the brilliance of Rossini's music ultimately spoke far louder than the words of a few naysayers. The world quickly forgot Mosca's opera.

And The Italian Girl in Algiers is indeed brilliant. Never a devoted student of complex counterpoint, Rossini delights in repeated, tuneful motifs, combining and re-combining instruments to create colorful orchestrations, and sudden changes in mood, timbre, and volume. In setting the poetic text of the libretto, Rossini's love of contrast creates highly effective musical drama. When we first meet Isabella, our eponymous Italian girl, we behold a shipwrecked traveler in a foreign land, surrounded by strange, leering men. Her aria "Cruda sorte!" presents an impression we might expect from a nineteenth-century "lover" character: she bewails her cruel fate in a slow, expressive number that sounds more like opera seria than buffa. But this "heroic" style opening gives way to a lighter, more catlike music, full of quick turns and mischievous-sounding accidentals. It shows us another side of Isabella: more than just a helpless lover, this is an Italian girl who knows how to handle herself. This second section was not in the original libretto; it was added at the behest of Rossini, allowing him to set up and then cleverly subvert the audience's expectations of his lead female character.

The quirks of Rossini's style not only make for engaging musical drama—they can also be wickedly funny. In Act I, Bey Mustafa attempts to get rid of his tiresome wife by setting her up with Lindoro, his Italian slave, while Lindoro tries to come up with excuses to avoid the arrangement. This is a funny situation in and of itself, but Rossini sets the text (the duet “Se inclinassi prender moglie”) as a series of punchy repeated phrases and motives, a perfect musical representation of Mustafa and Lindoro's frantic attempts to avoid a direct confrontation. In the finale of the first act, Rossini very nearly dispenses with words altogether, letting the characters express the lunacy of their situation with rapid note runs, back-and-forth exchanges, and delightfully bizarre onomatopoeic exclamations. But not all of Italian Girl's comedy comes from snappy exchanges. In Act II, Isabella plays on the patriotism of her fellow captive Italians by urging them to think of their homeland in the grand “Pensa alla patria.” If we fail to find the humor in this seria-style aria alone, we are bound to see it when the aria is juxtaposed with a trio in which Lindoro and Taddeo explain to Mustafa the honor found in eating, drinking, and sleeping.

The Italian Girl in Algiers debuted in 1813 and, the few naysayers aside, it was extremely well received. It has remained more or less consistently in the repertory ever since. Rossini deserves every bit of the recognition he receives today from his overtures, but we undoubtedly miss out on a great deal if we never witness the musical dramas that follow them. The Italian Girl in Algiers is indeed a masterpiece of comic opera, and our repertory is all the richer for it.

Isabella, an Italian girl

A native of Washington State, mezzo-soprano Veronica Jensen is an associate instructor of voice pursuing a Master of Music in Voice Performance in the studio of Heidi Grant-Murphy. The role of Thi Kính in the The Tale of Lady Thi Kính marked her IU Opera Theater debut during her first year at IU. Jensen graduated from Western Washington University with a Bachelor of Music in Vocal Performance, where she performed the roles of Cendrillon in Massenet's Cendrillon, Zerlina in Mozart's Don Giovanni, and Edith in The Pirates of Penzance by Gilbert and Sullivan. While at Western Washington University, she won first place in the concerto competition singing Ravel's Sheherazade and first place in the annual aria competition. She was a featured soloist in Bach's Magnificat with the Whatcom Symphony in Bellingham, Wash. During the summer of 2012, Jensen performed in Southern France with the Franco American Vocal Academy in three Offenbach operettas—The Tales of Hoffmann (the Mother), Bagatelle, and Le Mariage aux Lanternes. She placed third in the Franco American Vocal Academy's 2013 Grand Concours de Chant in Austin, Texas.

Mezzo-soprano/contralto Deniz Uzun was raised in Mannheim, Germany, and received her Bachelor of Voice degree from the University of Music in Mannheim as a scholarship holder of the Friedrich Ebert Foundation and Richard Wagner Foundation. Since 2012, she has been coached by Oylun Erdayi (Turkey/Ankara) in addition to master classes with Stephen King, Margreet Honig, Deborah Voigt, and Ressa Koleva. She won the Charlotte-Hamel Prize at the 41st National Singers Contest Berlin 2014. Before and during her studies, she performed at the Nationaltheater Mannheim and in two productions of the Young Artists Program of the Baden-Baden Easter Festival 2013—as Armelinde in Viardot's Cendrillon and as Third Lady in Mozart's The Magic Flute with the Berliner Philharmoniker. In the same year, she was invited to the Liedacademy of the Spring Festival Heidelberg to work as a scholar with Thomas Hampson and Thomas Quasthoff. Since fall 2013, Uzun has been studying with Andreas Poulimenos at the Jacobs School of Music as an artistic diploma student and has received an Artistic Excellence Award and a Travel Grant Award. She received the Georgina Joshi Scholarship in fall 2014. Future engagements include the Baden-Baden Easter Festival 2015, where she is going to sing the role of Annina in La Traviata with Olga Peretyatko as Violetta, conducted by Pablo Heras-Casado and directed by Rollando Villazon.
