Handel Underwriting

Through the vision of Georgina's mother, Louise Addicott-Joshi, The Georgina Joshi Foundation, Inc., was established in 2007 as a 501(c)(3) charitable foundation to provide, among other things, educational and career development opportunities for young musicians and to encourage and support the public performance of music.

*- let music flow and surround the world
let humanity be drawn in beautiful music -*

George Frideric Handel, a German-English baroque composer, was famous for his operas, oratorios, and concerti grossi. He was strongly influenced by the techniques of the great composers of the Italian Baroque period and English composer Henry Purcell. Handel's music was well known to many composers, including Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. His body of work includes 42 operas, 29 oratorios, more than 120 cantatas, trios, and duets, numerous arias, chamber music, and 16 organ concerti. His most well-known works include Messiah, Giulio Cesare, Water Music, and Music for the Royal Fireworks.

Because of the variety of musical styles, vocal ranges, and musical instruments used in Handel's works, it is important for students preparing for a career in opera performance to be well versed in, and comfortable with, singing his music. The Georgina Joshi Fund, administered by The Georgina Joshi Foundation, Inc., and the Indiana University Foundation, was established to encourage and support the student performance of Handel's operas and oratorios. It is the goal of The Georgina Joshi Foundation, Inc., that Jacobs students be able to study and perform major works of Handel every year.

Through the generosity of the Georgina Joshi Foundation, Inc., the Jacobs School of Music has been able to produce three fully staged Handel operas—Giulio Cesare in 2009, Xerxes in 2013, and Alcina in 2015—as well as two oratorios—Judas Maccabaeus in 2011 and Esther in 2013. In each case, the foundation was instrumental in bringing to the Jacobs School renowned Welsh soprano and Handel expert Eiddwen Harrhy to conduct several days of coaching for the students preparing for these performances.

The IU Jacobs School of Music remains grateful to The Georgina Joshi Foundation, Inc., for its friendship and continued support.

A native of Indiana, Georgina Joshi had received her Bachelor of Music degree from the Royal College of Music, London, where she studied with Eiddwen Harrhy. Notably, Joshi had sung for the gala opera night at the Beaumaris Festival with the Welsh Chamber Orchestra conducted by Anthony Hose. She had also performed the role of the first Harlot in Handel's Solomon conducted by William Jon Gray for the Bloomington Early Music Festival. Joshi was pursuing her Master of Music in Voice at the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music, where she studied with Alan Bennett. Her first role at IU was Clorinda in La Cenerentola.

Synopsis

Act I

A day on Alcina's Magic Island

Bradamante, disguised as her own brother, Ricciardo, is in search of her fiancé, Ruggiero. She is accompanied by her guardian, Melisso. They land on the magic island that is ruled by the sorceress Alcina, who has enchanted Ruggiero with her charms. Meanwhile, Bradamante and Melisso are met by Alcina's sister, Morgana, who, not realizing that Bradamante is only disguised as a man, falls in love with "him."

Bradamante soon meets Alcina and Ruggiero, who have become inseparable. Alcina welcomes Bradamante and Melisso and declares her love for Ruggiero. Meanwhile, young Oberto, who has come searching for his father, Astolfo, asks Melisso and Bradamante if they know what has happened to him. They resist telling him that his father was Alcina's lover, who was turned into an animal when she grew tired of him.

Bradamante, still disguised as Ricciardo, scolds Ruggiero for his faithlessness, but Ruggiero only mocks "him." He swears that he will never leave Alcina. Rejected by Ruggiero and pursued by Morgana, Bradamante now meets Morgana's jealous lover, Oronte, and narrowly avoids having a duel with him.

Using Oronte's jealousy as an excuse, Morgana rejects him. Oronte in revenge tells Ruggiero that Alcina has fallen in love with Ricciardo/Bradamante and, like all her former lovers, Ruggiero will soon be transformed into an animal by the sorceress. Ruggiero confronts Alcina in front of "Ricciardo." Offended that he thinks she is unfaithful, Alcina leaves. Bradamante tries to reveal her true identity to Ruggiero, who does not believe her. He urges Alcina to prove her love by getting rid of his rival. Out of desperation, Bradamante, still disguised as Ricciardo, throws herself into Morgana's arms.

Act II

That night

Ruggiero is looking for Alcina. Melisso meanwhile disguises himself as Ruggiero's former tutor, Atlante, and gives him a magic ring. The ring undoes the spell that Alcina has cast over Ruggiero. Freed of the spell, he immediately desires to see his beloved Bradamante again. When she once again reveals her true identity, he decides that this is another of Alcina's spells and spurns her. Eventually, Ruggiero begins to see what has happened. Meanwhile, Alcina and Morgana both sense that something has changed in the men they love. When Oronte tells them that Ruggiero is secretly getting ready to leave with Bradamante, Alcina is heartbroken. Morgana, however, refuses to believe that she has been betrayed, but when she hears Bradamante and Ruggiero talking together, she realizes that she been betrayed twice: by a woman disguised as a man and who also lied to her about being in love. As Ruggiero prepares to leave the magic world, Alcina tries to conjure up spirits to help her regain his love. As the act ends, she curses her magic powers and falls into a deep and troubled sleep.

Act III

The next morning

Morgana admits that she still has feelings for Oronte, who, in turn, forgives her inconstancy. Alcina fails in her last desperate attempt to keep Ruggiero's affections. He is determined to gain his freedom by force, if necessary. Alcina tries to stop him with her magic powers. Ultimately, Alcina's forces are beaten by Ruggiero and his allies. Powerless and seeking revenge, she tries to force Oberto to kill his own father. Instead, Oberto turns on Alcina; with Ruggiero also prepared to kill Alcina, her magic kingdom collapses. In the end, Ruggiero is celebrated as the liberator of all those who were enslaved by Alcina's power.

Director's Notes

by Chas Rader-Shieber

There is great beauty, allure, and a certain kind of magic in the theater.

We are momentarily transported, seduced, and even transformed by its enchantments. But as the curtain falls at the end, we realize that the dream is short lived, and we return to our own lives, hopefully enlightened by the experience—perhaps even our truer selves.

In this production, Alcina's magical island is the world of the theater itself. She uses its elaborately painted visions and its surface beauty to trap and imprison the men she so desperately needs to feed her desire to be loved. Once the illusion is discovered, revealed, and ultimately destroyed, her true nature is ours to see: sad, but profoundly human.

Handel is the master of combining the comic, dramatic, romantic, and the disarmingly poignant. In Alcina, he offers a spectacular range of emotional truths and a surprisingly moving cast of characters—more like us than we might really want to admit.

Program Notes

by Kirby Haugland

When Handel wrote Alcina, he had already composed nearly 30 operas for London audiences, and the appeal of Italian opera seria was beginning to wane. Handel's recent works had seen few performances, but Alcina was different. Premiering on April 16, 1735, at John Rich's new Covent Garden Theatre, it was performed 18 times and revived the following season. Anna Strada del Pò sang the title role opposite castrato Giovanni Carestini as Ruggiero. Several dance interludes were interspersed in the original production to illustrate scenes like Alcina's magical court and her feverish dreams after Act II. One performance nearly caused a riot when King George II would not allow an encore from dancer Marie Sallé despite the audience's demands. Subsequent productions generally cut many of these instrumental dances, which are somewhat out of place in the opera seria genre, despite their popularity with the London audiences.

Like many of Handel's operas, Alcina uses a borrowed libretto, in this case from Riccardo Broschi's 1728 L'isola di Alcina. The story comes from Ludovico Ariosto's sixteenth-century epic poem Orlando furioso, which tells tales of Orlando and other knights during Charlemagne's war against the invading Muslim Saracens. Among the poem's many characters is Ruggiero, an orphan raised as a Saracen by the wizard Atlante. He falls in love with the Christian warrior Bradamante and eventually converts to marry her, forming a mythical bloodline for Ariosto's patron Cardinal Ippolito d'Este. Early in the poem, Ruggiero is taken by the hippogryph to Alcina and Morgan's island. He meets the knight Astolfo, who has been turned into a myrtle and who warns him of the wily sorceress sisters and their fickle love. However, Ruggiero still falls under Alcina's spell when he inadvertently fights a battle on her behalf. Bradamante searches far and wide for her lover before asking the good sorceress Melissa for help. Melissa travels to the island and restores Ruggiero to his senses with her magical ring, helping him escape and return to Bradamante.

The opera primarily diverges from Ariosto's story through its focus on Alcina, who becomes its tragic central figure. Despite her capricious abuse of men in the past, her love for Ruggiero is real. Her aria "Ah! mio cor!" upon learning that Ruggiero is preparing to flee, makes full use of the da capo form to express her pain. In the opening Andante larghetto she plaintively calls to the gods and stars, begging to know why her love has betrayed her. On the words "alone, alone in tears," she jumps between octaves and descends chromatically, emphasizing her desolation and recalling the classic lament motive of a descending tetrachord. The middle section brings a dramatic contrast. Furious strings underscore Alcina's shift to rage as she vows that Ruggiero will either come back to her or suffer eternally. In the da capo, her sorrow returns, driving home her impotence. While she might vow revenge, all Alcina really wants is for her love to be reciprocated.

When the Act II finale comes, Alcina sings the only accompanied recitative in the entire opera as she futilely attempts to cast another spell on Ruggiero. A chordal background coalesces into unison sixteenth notes as she begins her incantation. But the spirits refuse to answer, and all the strings except for colla parte violins desert her. The incipit of Alcina's subsequent aria "Ombre pallide" echoes the chromatically tinged octaves on "alone" from her earlier lament, as she realizes that her isolation is permanent.

The opera's emotional climax is its sole trio "Non è amor, nè gelosia," when Alcina attempts one last time to get Ruggiero back from Bradamante. Instead of a dialogue in recitative, we hear a synthesis: a final fully orchestrated da capo "aria," through which Alcina's appeals to mercy and warnings of the future are soundly rejected by the reunited couple. Handel saved his technical flourishes for the specific moments that mark Alcina's fall, and after the Act III trio, the opera comes swiftly to its close. Ruggiero is also granted orchestral novelty by Handel through the addition of flutes to "Mio bel tesoro" and horns to "Stà nell' Ircana pietrosa tana." Their extra orchestral color helps emphasize Ruggiero's deception and his return to the role of the hero.

Through the music sung by Alcina, Ruggiero, and the opera's other characters, Handel gave voice to the many facets of love. His success in doing so made Alcina popular during his lifetime and has established it in the modern repertory since its revival in the mid-twentieth century.
